Council scrambles to block federal communications 'tower' from downtown

By KENDALL KLYM

VILLAGE CHARACTER took priority over telecommunications Tuesday when the Carmel City Council voted to adopt an urgency ordinance to temporarily limit development of a large tower within the city limits.

A result of the encroaching Information Superhighway, wireless communications would consolidate telephone, television and possibly computer services into a transmitting unit. The only catch is that many communities have been required to erect high-tension cables to receive the services.

The issue of local control over the look of Carmel combined with a fear of being forced by the federal government to put up a tower of steel in the middle of town prompted council members to vote 4-0 to adopt the ordinance.

Mayor Ken White was unable to attend the meeting because of back problems.

According to the text of the ordinance, the purpose of the legislation is to protect the village character of Carmel and ensure the "health, safety and welfare" of its citizens.

The ordinance gave council members only a limited sense of satisfaction, for they realize the final decision will remain in the hands of the federal government.

Councilwoman Barbara Livingston noted that the City of Half Moon Bay did not get a choice when officials from a design firm claimed they received federal permission to build a 150-foot tower on post office property, which is owned by the U.S. Government.

"That's pretty scary," she said before making a motion to adopt the urgency ordinance.

Chris Gustin, planning and building director for the City of Half Moon Bay, said in a telephone interview that representa-

Caltrans to minimize impacts of construction at valley mouth

Pine Cone Staff Report

CALTRANS WORKERS began moonlighting this week in an attempt to prevent traffic jams during road construction at Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road.

The $360,000 road construction project will revamp the intersection by providing:

- An additional left-turn lane onto Carmel Valley Road.

- A new signal which will provide dual left-turn arrows for the two lanes of traffic turning onto Carmel Valley Road from Highway 1.

- An additional eastbound lane on Carmel Valley Road between Highway 1 and Carmel Rancho Boulevard.

- A new signal at Carmel Valley Road and Carmel Rancho to accommodate the additional eastbound lane on Carmel Valley Road.

Improvements on the intersection which require traffic control — such as lane closures or one-way flagging operations — have been scheduled for week nights, between 9:30 p.m. and 6 a.m., to minimize inconvenience to drivers.

According to Val Howdysshell, spokesperson for Caltrans, working at night isn't the only step taken to make life easier for drivers on Carmel Valley Road:

Although Caltrans could have begun construction in July, it postponed its start date until after the busy tourist season, so it wouldn't add to already heavy traffic on the roads.

Construction, which began Monday with workers surveying and staking right-of-way lines, is expected to wrap up in December.

■ In Appreciation: Frank Putnam, 1915-1996

They called him 'Mr. Carmel'

By Kendall Klym

IN THE case of Frank Putnam, it takes one concerned resident to raise a whole village.

A man who seemed to be able to do it all for his community, Mr. Putnam at one point served as Carmel's mayor, president of the Carmel Rotary, volunteer firefighter with the Carmel Fire Department, co-owner of Putnam and Raggett dry goods store and a family man remembered for his good nature and generosity.

Mr. Putnam died July 28 in Los Gatos of complications relating to long-term emphysema.

(Editor's note: We explain the delay in reporting Mr. Putnam's death because he had not made the village his home since 1971, and the family did not release the news of his death until this week.)

As the mayor of Carmel from 1960 to 1962, Mr. Putnam was an advocate of limiting growth in favor of Carmel's quiet, residential atmosphere, recalled the current mayor, Ken White.

Barney Laiolo, a three-term mayor after Mr. Putnam served, described him as a "straightforward guy who called it like he saw it." Laiolo added, "He didn't fool around. I like that."

As a family man, Mr. Putnam was always willing to let friends and their children accompany him on fishing trips.

John Raggett, whose father ran the Ocean Avenue dry-goods store with Mr. Putnam, remembers one of those expeditions from more than 25 years ago.

"It was the only time I caught a salmon," Raggett said. "I was a little kid. He (Mr. Putnam) was just a fine guy. My recollection of him is as a fishing partner of my father's and as an enthusiastic supporter of Carmel."

Anne Harris, one of Mr. Putnam's daughters, recalls her father's dedication to Carmel through his efforts as a volunteer firefighter.

"We'd be sitting down to dinner, and then he'd take off rushing somewhere to put out a fire," Harris said. "He was very loyal to the town. Carmel was definitely in his heart because he took the town seriously. It was a large part of his life."

Harris also said that her father would catch so many salmon out of the Monterey Bay that he'd "just give them away" to local residents.

Nicknamed "Mr. Carmel," Mr. Putnam was 80, less than a year older than the city he loved.

He is survived by his wife, Frances, of Los Gatos; a son, Reed, of Berkeley; two daughters, Anne Harris, of Los Gatos and Jane Cantin of Scotts Valley; seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Measure E pits preservationists vs. Salinas Valley agribusiness

By KENDALL KLYM

MEASURE E, an initiative that would enable voters to decide the fate of farmland in Monterey County, has pitted the preservation-oriented Monterey Peninsula against the agribusiness-minded Salinas Valley.

Cultivated by Peninsula homeowners on a mission to stop urban sprawl, the initiative would require a vote of the people before agriculturally zoned land can be rezoned for development.

While many homeowners from Carmel Valley and Monterey laud the measure as a method of squelching the efforts of money-hungry developers, ranchers and farmers from Salinas and other Valley communities criticize it as an unfair reaction to development and agricultural interests.

★ ELECTION '96 ★

According to the text of the measure:

■ Farmland, rural grazing land, permanent grazing land and resource conservation land may be converted to other categories such as residential and industrial only after once citizens have voted in a ballot.

■ The initiative requires all 1.4 million acres of existing farmland and resource land in the county to remain in its current state through Dec. 31, 2025 unless the lands are annexed by a city or town.

■ Before the Monterey County Board of Supervisors can reclassify agricultural and conservation land, it must determine that:

— The annexation of the property is not feasible.

— The land is adjacent to already developed land.

— A long-term water supply is proven by "substantial evidence."

— The proposed new use is compatible with surrounding uses.

— The land has not been in agricultural production for two years

— The land is not suitable for agricultural production.

■ Redesignation of more than 40 acres per year per landowner or group of landowners will be prohibited.

Proponents of the measure say it ensures that the public has a say about the future of its communities, threatened by overdevelopment.

"People from the community know better than elected officials because they are not influenced like supervisors," said Carol Spencer, an advocate of the measure and a Carmel Valley resident. "People have a gut feeling about the direction a community is going in because they live in it."

On a tour of Carmel Valley, which has undergone extensive residential building during the past decade, Spencer said the measure would stop out-of-control development from taking over irreplaceable agricultural land.

"This would be prime land for development," she said, standing at the edge of a corn field on the corner of Schulte and Carmel Valley roads. "I'm passionate that this area does not follow in the footsteps of San Jose, and I think that's what's happening in Salinas."

Mike Weaver, a resident of Corral de Tierra, said the measure would "put some teeth into the current general plan," which he claims has not been followed when farmland has been rezoned for development.

He noted the measure would prohibit a developer from "hiring a hydrologist who states there are no water problems" and Carol Spencer, a Carmel Valley resident and proponent of the controversial Measure E, is concerned that Monterey County farmland will be destroyed in the wake of mass development. The measure calls for a vote by the people for zoning changes of farmland and conservation land.

then getting approval from supervisors.

Spencer said the measure states that a long-term water supply and an adequate infrastructure must be secured before supervisors can proceed with the approval of zoning changes.

This measure, moreover, would require the supervisors to hold a public hearing in the affected area.

Critics of the initiative say it would violate the constitutional rights of landowners while failing to keep agricultural land from being developed.

According to a legal analysis by attorney Ronald Zumbrun, if passed, the initiative would deny property owners equal protection of the law and due process as stated by the Fourteenth Amendment.

The violation would occur when all property owners except those who own agricultural or resource conservation land would be able to request a zoning change without a vote.

Scott Hennessy, District 5 Monterey County planning commissioner, said in a written statement: "Measure E does not protect ag land within cities, nor does it prevent cities from annexing and urbanizing adjacent land. I also believe that passage of Measure E will prevent the option of a measure more protective of ag land, which could be developed by working with the owners of the land which Measure E proposes to protect."

Proponents of the plan who profess they want to protect farm interests have failed to consult farmers and agribusiness owners in their efforts, said David Bunn, spokesman for the Committee for Responsible Land Use, a lobby group opposed to the initiative.

Bunn said the future of farming exists in burgeoning ag industry such as producing "lightly processed vegetables," which requires converting some ag-land into industrial land to build processing plants.

Furthermore, he said, development of agricultural land into residential areas for low-cost housing for farm laborers would only benefit society.

'Academy' teaches Carmel a lesson

WHEN a French outfit notified Carmel in May the village had won a nifty prize (the "Art of Living Award"), the city should have replied:

"How much is it?"

BUT Carmel didn't. So now it's in the awkward position of having to either pony up $30,000 to the French outfit or tell the world, "Hey, you know that snazzy award we told you we had won? Well, please don't print that, okay? We'll explain later."

Carmel Valley's irrepressible Jill Margaret Brown thinks she knows how Carmel got French rolled. (If it actually did.)

"THE FRENCH organization's full name is the Academy of Defense and Illustrations of the Art of Living, yet goes by the acronym of ACEDIA," explained JMB.

"Acedia is a French word," she went on, "which means 'A really swell award that has nothing phony about it.'"

"BUT as you can see, the actual acronym for the organization is ADIAL, and 'adial' is French word that means, 'Your turn to buy.'"

Well, we couldn't find JMB's definitions in our borrowed French-English dictionary, but one former Carmel City Council member — Barbara Brooks — seems ready to believe JMB's version.

"AS far as I'm concerned," said Barbara, "the award is a complete boondoggle and just a good excuse for the French to travel for free."

(The academy explained the 30 grand is to cover an all-expenses-paid trip to Carmel for academy members, plus publication of a booklet telling something about Carmel and at least 12 pages on what a splendid group the academy is!)

CARMEL Mayor Ken White and the rest of the City Council have put final acceptance of the award on hold until they can investigate the academy further.

JMB suggests the city invest the 30 G's in something a little more secure — like the lottery! (But then, JMB is a card-carrying cynic from 'way back.)

TODAY'S QUOTE . . . Actor Larry Miller on martinis:

"One is not enough. Two is too many. Three is not enough."

MEET this Peninsula star, a Charlie of all trades! By sheer coincidence, his name happens to be Charlie Star, but it wasn't always.

WHEN he and his former wife were struggling actors in Hollywood, they decided they had to do something to make themselves more memorable at auditions, so they legally changed their last name to Star.

It worked! They began getting more call-backs for bit parts in movies and for commercials and for whatever else Hollywood people do. (Never mind.)

ANYWAY, when they moved to the Peninsula a few years ago, Charlie turned chef and they bought and ran Carmel Cafe for a couple of years before selling it and starting a Pacific Grove deli-restaurant called Goodie's. (That apostrophe doesn't belong in there at all, but I'm weary of fighting that battle.)

AGAIN, Charlie was chef, but they sold it last June and Charlie decided he was burned out by kitchens and wanted to find something entirely different.

He did. And now he's the proud proprietor (and darn near the whole staff) of Charlie's Gardens, a Carmel firm that designs and builds gardens for the smallest condos on up to the largest estate homes.

IT'S that Charlie-of-all-trades syndrome again, and Charlie is good at it — just as he was at acting and chef-ing.

As part of his new career, Charlie has become a student and practitioner of Feng Shui (say fang shway), the oriental art of the placement of objects (rocks, trees, shrubs, flowers) to achieve the most satisfying visual and psychological effect.

1997 Farmers Almanac available

By CRAIG ARNOTT

IF YOUR left hand itches, a letter is coming. If deer interfere with your gardening, string blinking Christmas lights around your garden's perimeter.

The above sampling of obscure folk wisdom can only mean the publication Tuesday of the 1997 Western Edition of the Farmers Almanac, the oldest periodical in North America. Over 4.5 million copies are distributed each year. The new edition is available at local bookstores.

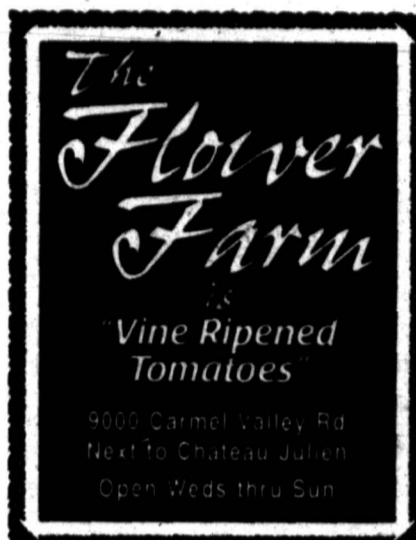

Perhaps the most consulted and quoted section of the Almanac concerns its weather forecasts, about which publishers claim an impressive 80 percent accuracy rate on a seasonal basis.

For California weather for the remainder of the year through the Spring of 1997, here's the forecast:

■ The period from November through March is expected to be warmer and drier than normal overall, and the last two months of 1996 will see above-normal temperatures but below-normal rainfall.

■ In January, two or three major storms in the last week or two of the month will bring heavy rain and strong, damaging winds.

■ A major freeze in the Central Valley seems unlikely, although several frosts will occur in February and March.

Resident's fight to reduce Big Sur telephone rates pays off

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

AFTER 20 years of frustration with paying — as he calls them — “incredibly high telephone bills,” Big Sur resident John S. Cluett went to bat for Big Sur residents and hit a homer.

On Aug. 2, the California Public Utilities Commission ordered Pacific Bell to cut long distance costs on calls from Big Sur to Carmel and Monterey.

Cluett had filed a complaint with the PUC in late 1994 on behalf of himself and 25 other Big Sur residents.

Cluett argued that it was unfair to force persons living in the Big Sur telephone exchange to pay long distance rates to calls for services which other communities take for granted.

Since Big Sur “contains no police, hospital, medical facilities, schools, grocery stores or government offices, Big Sur residents must pay long-distance rates to the Monterey Peninsula for most all their services,” he said.

Initially, Cluett and Pacific Bell negotiated several settlement options, but were unable to agree.

Cluett wanted Pacific Bell to include Big Sur in the Carmel exchange, charging residents the same amounts Carmel residents would pay for local calls.

Under the PUC decision, Big Sur residents can now make toll-free local calls to Carmel and Monterey, but will pay a higher monthly charge.

For example, residents with a flat rate of service will pay $18.65 a month instead of $11.25.

Despite this monthly rate increase, residents will still end up saving money, according to Cluett. He estimates the average Big Sur telephone customer will save hundreds of dollars a year under the new arrangement.

According to the PUC decision, a late May survey of Big Sur residents and businesses by the PUC's Division of Ratepayer Advocates showed a majority (78 percent) of respondents wanted toll-free calling to Carmel and Monterey.

Although his phone bill will be less each month, Cluett didn't get everything he asked for.

“I'm happy with the results,” he said. “It's not the best possible (resolution), but it is reasonable and much better.”

Cluett said he was fortunate he had the time it took to get the phone rates changed.

“It took a ridiculous amount of time to get anything done with this,” he said.

“There are a lot of things like this that a lot of people are quietly angry about, but don't have the time to deal with it. I would love to say ‘Isn't it great that an individual can go in and get something made right?’”

New headmaster at All Saints hits ground running

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

AS DOYLE Tunnell strolls through the playground, little girls in plaid jumpers and little boys in crisp white shirts run past him and fling greetings back over their shoulders.

Although Tunnell has only been headmaster at All Saints Episcopal Day School for three months, he already knows many students by name.

Tunnell took over at the Carmel Valley school in July, replacing Jay Roudebush, who was serving an interim stint as headmaster while the school searched for a replacement for Laurie Boone Hogen.

Hogen, who was headmistress of All Saints for 18 years, moved to Connecticut last summer.

Tunnell left his position as head of grades five through eight at Casady School, an Episcopalian prekindergarten through 12th grade school in Oklahoma City, to assume his new post with All Saints.

After a whirlwind weekend of house hunting in May, Tunnell and his wife, Sandra, found a home in Carmel Valley.

"House hunting was a shock," he said. "It was not unanticipated, but I still didn't realize how expensive it would be."

He noted that he moved from one of the lowest-priced housing markets in the country (Oklahoma) to one of the highest.

New names and faces

The couple moved from Oklahoma the last week of June, and Tunnell started work July 1. He said the first three months have "gone very rapidly."

"There's been something on my agenda every moment," he said. "That's fun. That's the exciting part. I'm learning the daily routine and the nuances of the community and families."

He said his new role doesn't differ much from his old one, but the enrollment of All

Big Sur Multi-Agency Advisory Council to tackle Mill Creek timber harvesting plan

Pine Cone Staff Report

A PROPOSED timber harvesting plan for the Mill Creek Watershed in Big Sur will be discussed at the next Big Sur Multi-Agency Advisory Council meeting.

The plan calls for a commercial timber harvest operation on 80 acres of private property in the Mill Creek Watershed.

The three-year project would allow Menasha Corporation to harvest sawlogs and firewood from Montana Conifer Hardwood, Montane Hardwood and Redwood trees.

Discussions at the meeting, (10 a.m., Friday, Sept. 20 at the Pfeiffer Big Sur Lodge Conference Center at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park in Big Sur), will also include the following topics:

A report by 5th District Monterey County Supervisor Sam Karas on the future of the Big Sur Viewshed.

Money from Proposition 70, passed in 1988 to protect the viewshed, is running out. Under Prop 70, the county spent more than $13 million (out of $25 million) to protect land from development by purchasing it. The remaining $12 million is planned to purchase development rights for more than 3,000 acres of the El Sur Ranch.

Karas and former Supervisor Karin Strasser-Kauffman serve on an ad hoc committee which will explore the transfer of development credits as an alternative form of compensation to property owners.

A presentation by Mike Guiliano, Caltrans Project Manager on the Seismic Retrofit of Historic Bridges on the Big Sur Coast. Guiliano will give an overview of a future Caltrans project to strengthen six of the historic bridges on the Big Sur coast. Guiliano will introduce the proposal and talk about the historic value of the bridges and potential traffic impacts during construction. Guiliano said construction will not begin until late 1997 or possibly 1998.

A report by Maria Holquin-Guerrero from the Community Foundation Neighborhoods 2000 Project.

The foundation is currently seeking a grant from the Packard Foundation to fund projects by neighborhood groups to improve the quality of life in neighborhoods. In addition to funding, the foundation provides technical assistance and leadership training for neighborhood groups.

Holquin-Guerrero said the foundation wants input from Big Sur residents on what types of needs exist in the area, anything from neighborhood clean-ups to creating gardens for seniors or arranging disaster preparedness groups.

TUNNELL

Saints (about 200) is smaller than at Casady (with 900 students).

Tunnell said the size difference is "a positive." "A school this small can build a sense of community and family to a greater extent than a larger school," he said. "There are a greater percentage of families involved, which is a great strength."

Tunnell said one of his biggest challenges thus far is learning all the new names, along with "learning as much about the school as quickly as I can."

In addition, his future goals include working with the school's board of trustees to develop a vision for the school, which will include long- and short-term planning.

In the meantime, Tunnell and his wife, Sandra, are taking in the many amenities of the Peninsula. He said it's easy to find things to do, but harder to find time to do them.

"It's just astounding; the number of activities available," said Tunnell. "We look at the calendar and decide what we will try to do this time and what we will try to do next year."

So far they have caught the action at the Salinas Rodeo and last weekend attended the races at Laguna Seca, which Tunnell called "phenomenal."

He and Sandra had vacationed on the Peninsula on several occasions and found it hard to believe people could actually work and live in this resort-like area.

"We feel so fortunate to live and work and enjoy this area," he said "It's just beautiful and we continually give thanks for that."

With 2nd strong year in row, Monterey County Fair on track

By Kristi Belcamino

MORE THAN 62,000 people turned out to spin on the rides, devour cotton candy, admire livestock and take in the arts, crafts and trade booths at this year's Monterey County Fair.

The fair, held Aug. 20-25, marked the celebration of "60 Years of Oinks and Moos and Cock-A-Doodle-Doos."

"Our overall attendance was even with last year, the weather was great and, most importantly, people had a wonderful time," said Fair Manager Michael Sullivan.

Last year was a marked improvement for the fair, following a bad year at the box office in 1994 and other fiscal problems.

Gate sales have not been figured yet for this year. However, Sullivan said food sales were up two percent and parking revenue was up five percent — both good indicators of the event's overall success.

Special days

Special days of the fair included Kids' Day on Wednesday, Aug. 21, when 6,222 little ones trod the grounds free of charge; Special Friends Day on Aug. 22, when guests with physical or mental disabilities toured the fair for free and received a free lunch; and Seniors' Day, Aug. 20, which gave those 65 and over special activities.

Sullivan said the additions of an on-site cash machine, new food booths, a free petting zoo and "strolling" entertainment all went over well with the crowds.

Sullivan said the cash machine "went over big." Strolling entertainment included a magician, a juggler and Shriner clowns.

Sullivan said the island stage, near the front gate, received more use than it ever had in the past.

"We had a group there all the time singing and that was very nice," he said.

Attendance was nearly even with 1995 attendance, only off by 148 people.

Seaside's big mayoral battle has ramifications for Peninsula

(Editor's note: The Pine Cone is taking this special look at the Seaside mayoral race because the magnitude and quality of that city's redevelopment efforts will affect, directly or indirectly, the lives of everyone on the Monterey Peninsula. We believe it is our responsibility to report on "big picture" issues in the area, even when the focus is outside Carmel's city limits.)

By PAUL WOLF

SEASIDE MAYOR Don Jordan faces a lively challenge in his bid for re-election not because of Seaside's recent progress in achieving its goals, but despite it.

The at-large battle is a contest between four people who all believe they are the best qualified to lead the city during a period of expansion. While Jordan may have some natural advantages of incumbency, his three challengers are critical of his leadership during these fast-moving times.

These three combatants are Lance McClair, the former mayor, Darryl Choates, a Seaside City Council member, and Felix Bachofner, a member of the Seaside Planning Commission.

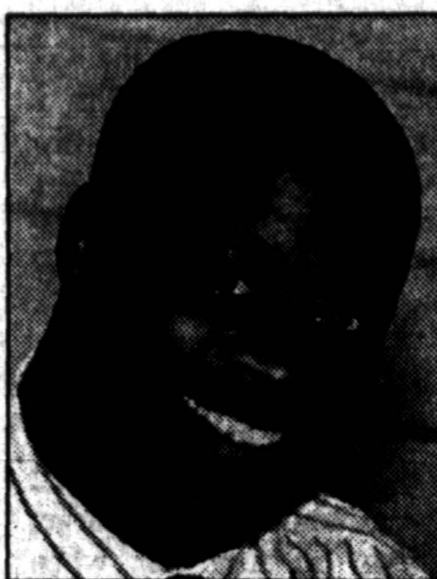

Jordan, 54, who challenged and decisively beat McClair in 1994, cites his accomplishments over the past two years: The completion of Embassy Suites. The K-Mart expansion. A host of new businesses in place or coming on-line. Many commitments for more projects. Reduced crime. A steadily improving image.

How much credit?

Choates, 34, has no reason to take issue with these markers of Seaside's progress. However, he does doubt that all, much or even some of the credit lies on the lap of the current mayor.

In fact, as a councilman since 1990, he

Darryl Choates

Lance McClair

Felix Bachofner

believes he has been more directly involved in achieving its goals, notably the city's expected acquisition of two Fort Ord golf courses.

(It should be noted that Jordan served on the city council before he was elected mayor, taking his first elected seat in a special election in 1991.)

Running from a safe seat — with two years remaining on his council term — Choates does not mince his words, accusing Jordan of "falsifying facts." Moreover, Choates views the battle as between himself and Jordan, not between himself and McClair or Bachofner.

"I have experience over him (Jordan)," Choates said. "He is a follower, not a leader. A rubber stamp."

Choates, a businessman whose family goes back generations in Seaside, said he has "a better grasp of local government" than does the mayor.

Other voices

The councilman is not alone in criticizing Jordan's leadership style or ability.

McClair, who served as mayor from 1982 to 1994, a total of six terms, said he entered the race because of the city's "leadership and management instability."

For starters, he believes Jordan relies too heavily on Seaside City Manager Tim Brown, who, in turn, relies too much on outside consultants, McClair said.

The result, the 53-year-old McClair said, is that the city has less money for city services and "is sending business south" — to highly paid Southern California consultants. Consequently, McClair added, the city's leadership "is letting outside interests control Seaside."

In his day, McClair said, city government was more open and accessible to the people. McClair cited the "neighborhood walks" for which he set aside time to get to know the townspeople face to face.

While Choates hopes the voters will consider his total experience on the council, McClair hopes voters will take into account experience encompassing two decades.

McClair said he and previous council members planted the seeds of Seaside's revitalization. "The groundwork was laid in the 1980s," he said.

Meanwhile, there is Bachofner, who hasn't served in local elected office but believes his planning commission experience provides him with leadership tools.

He gladly gives the other three credit for, say, Embassy Suites, but notes that it is a mixed blessing for Seaside. He supported a hotel, but he laments what is there — an oversized structure with massive amounts of parking in plain view.

"Some people consider me anti-development, and that is untrue," Bachofner said. "I am concerned about doing it right. There is a develop-now-or-perish attitude, which makes us want to fast-track any project that comes to the collective desktops of city officials."

Bachofner credits towns like Carmel and Pacific Grove for having the patience and foresight to send developers back to the drawing board for a scaled-down vision.

Bachofner, who did not wish to disclose his age, said the city's leadership needs not only a vision for economic improvement, but one for how the city should look — both in the commercial districts and the residential neighborhoods — after redevelopment

NATIONAL DOG WEEK IS SEPTEMBER 23

If you are a dog owner or enthusiast, take a moment during the week of September 23 to give some extra special attention to your favorite canine. That week is National Dog Week, a week to celebrate the companion known as man's best friend.

Million of Americans, and millions more around the world own dogs as pets. Dogs are affectionate, loyal, playful and intelligent, and many say that although humans and animals don't speak the same language, dogs can understand us and can "talk" back in their own way. Unfortunately, there are far more dogs than people to own them, 15 dogs are born for every one person in the United States. If you truly appreciate the dog, make sure your pet is spayed or neutered to prevent the birth of unwanted puppies. Also be sure your best friend is protected from disease with vaccinations and is wearing current ID.

efforts take place.

In the past, maintaining high development standards might have chased developers away, "but that is not the case now; there is tremendous interest in Seaside."

Jordan recognizes that his challengers face the weight of his incumbency. "I am comfortable with what I've done."

The mayor said there is much yet to be done.

Other developments in the works for Seaside include Seaside Village, which is slated for the property immediately adjacent to Embassy Suites. The Village would be a multi-use development featuring an entertainment center (possibly including a jazz club), a restaurant and a recreational facility, from which boats could be rented and taken onto Laguna Grande.

Jordan said the interest of developers is a testimonial to Seaside's growing prominence and potential — and improving image.

"Just two years ago, when you talked about Seaside to somebody you would meet on the street, the tone was very negative. Now you have a conversation with someone about Seaside and that tone is much different. In this short time, the image has changed."

The mayor's chair is not the only one up for grabs Nov. 5, as two city council seats are also available.

Helen Rucker and Gert Foreman are defending their places on the council. They are being challenged by three candidates — Nancy Amos, Lloyd Humes and James Thornsby.

From 'stepchild' to key player, Seaside gaining stature on Monterey Peninsula

By PAUL WOLF

THE MONTEREY Peninsula's erstwhile "stepchild," to use former mayor Lance McClair's term, is experiencing a dramatic growth spurt that is already changing its stature in the area.

And this growth can be understood from many perspectives.

First, of course, there is economic growth.

As developers of new commercial projects anticipate a central role for Seaside in the post-Fort Ord era, the town expects to be a major beneficiary of much of the disposable income that recently remained within the Army community.

In general, the health of its real estate markets in both the residential and commercial sectors is evident in rising property values, which have matched appreciation countywide, according to Kent Nelson, president of the Monterey County Association of Realtors.

But there is also a more literal meaning to the word growth. Seaside expects to see its boundaries stretch to include 4,028 acres of Fort Ord base.

City Manager Tim Brown reports the acquisition of two Army golf courses, Bayonet and Blackhorse, should be wrapped up by October.

The city also is growing in terms of its reputation — the expected boom town for commercial developers, while remaining an affordable place for families to settle on the Peninsula.

"People don't realize it has some of the best views on the Peninsula," as mayoral challenger Felix Bachofner put it.

Fifth District Monterey County Supervisor Sam Karas said he anticipates neighborhoods to be spruced up and commercial sector to have a greater variety of offerings.

"Seaside was floundering," he said. "There was a lot of racial tension. There was a lack of promise for the future. That appears to have evaporated. People in Seaside are proud of their city."

While its fast rate of growth often has been an ongoing cause concern to its neighbors to the south, who hope to minimize the impacts on the quality of life, Seaside is growing in confidence as a regional player.

Consider this. On the Fort Ord Reuse Authority, the city has two votes to the one vote each for Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove. Seaside will continue to resist the notion that its neighbors will attempt to micro-manage its redevelopment.

Alternately cooperative and defiant, Seaside insists on being in charge of its own destiny but still hopes to be a good neighbor.

"We are tearing down the walls around Seaside, and getting involved in everything," said Mayor Don Jordan.

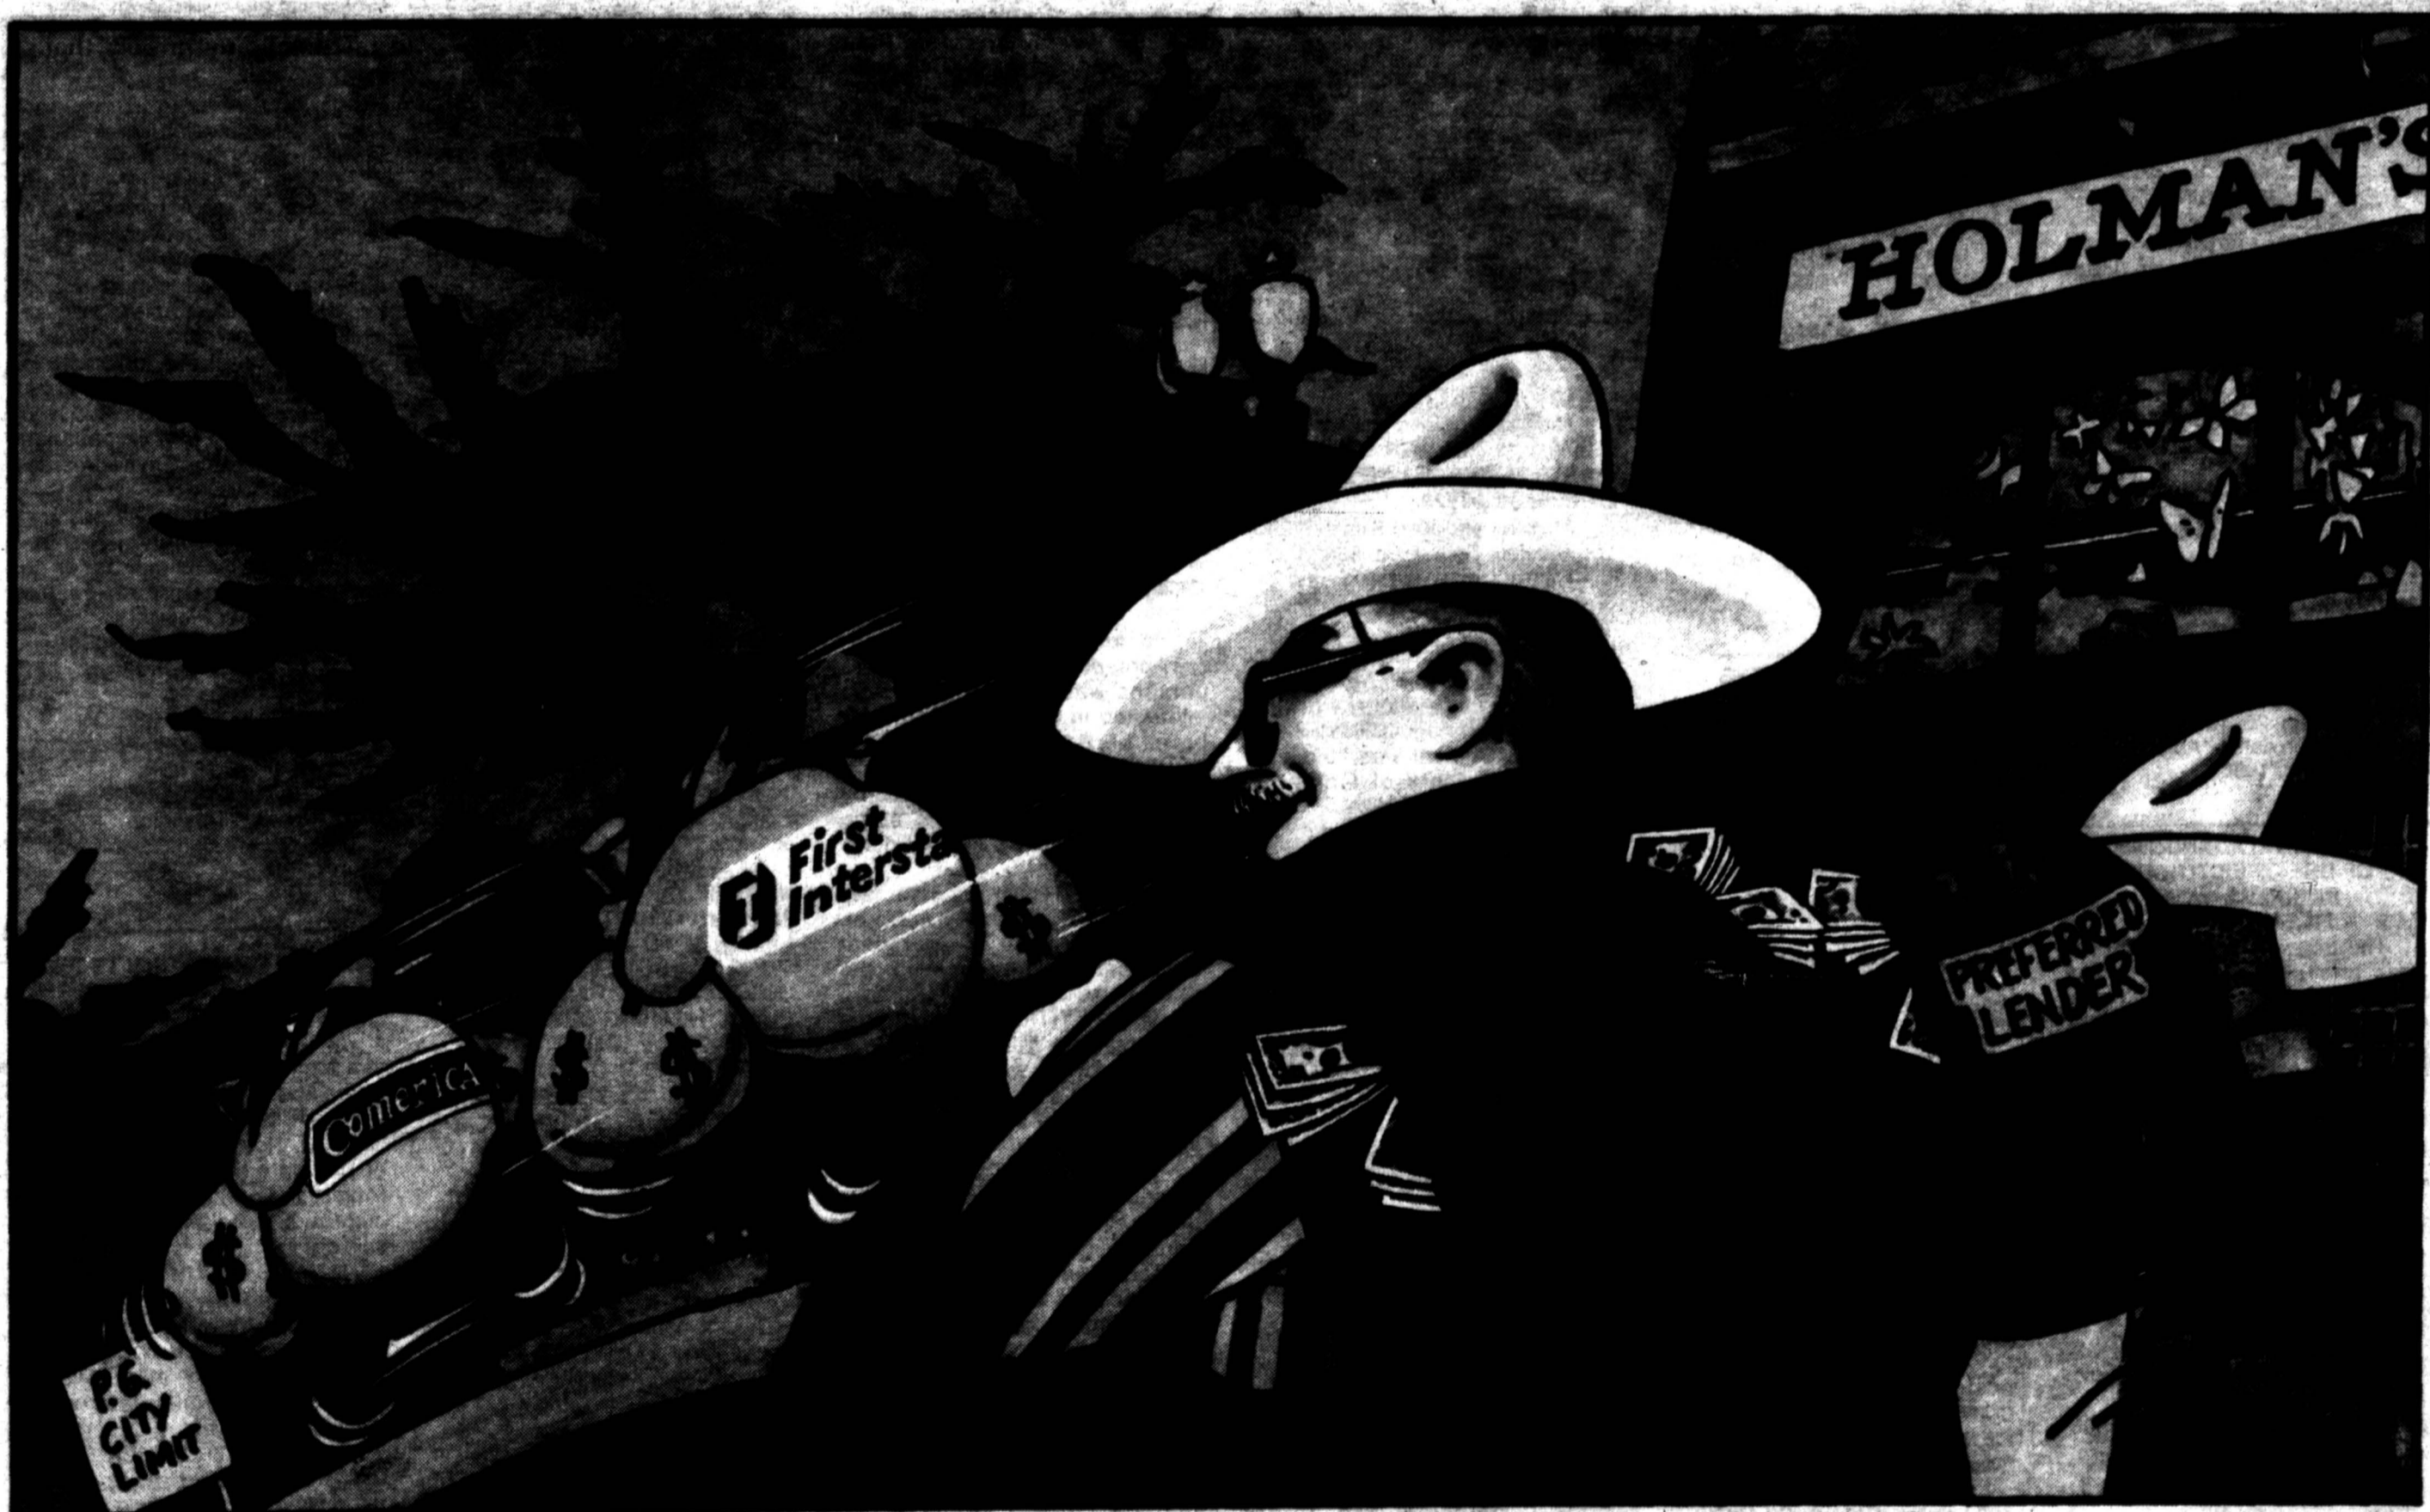

This notion of a New Day in Seaside, further aided by overall improvement in the California economy, is so ingrained in this mayoral field that the big issue in this campaign season will not be raising Seaside up from its bootstraps, but managing its speedy progress.

Anyway, I knew you were wondering what Charlie Star has been up to lately, so my entire column staff and I went to great pains to find out for you. This is, after all, a column in public service.

TINY ITEMS, MIND TO MATCH . . . Reggie Jackson's Dugout Diner at Franklin and Tyler in Monterey has struck out after a run of only 14 months, and what do you suppose will go in there next (choose one):

- 1- A southern chitlins and grits restaurant?
- 2- A Seattle-style coffee house?
- 3- A New York-style deli?
- 4- A pickles and ice cream shop for pregnant women?

IF you selected No. 3, you win a six months supply of cheese blintzes, a gift certificate to the next No. 4 that opens, and a truckload of Alka Seltzer!

Now as to who will be the proprietor of the new deli, it's a well-guarded secret, as yet, but think nails!

WHAT ever happened to indefatigable Don Bowen, Carmel's demon restaurant peddler?

Well, he peddles other things, as well, and last week he hauled off and peddled Carmel Valley's landmark Begonia Gardens Nursery, which went belly-up last December!

BUYERS are Dean and Barbara Griggs, who will also continue to operate their outstanding Griggs Nursery in Pacific Grove.

Seller was Monique Hanssens of Carmel Valley, who had to retrieve Begonia Gardens from bankruptcy proceedings when the previous operators defaulted. Demon Don brought the Griggs' and Mrs. Hanssens together.

Begonia Gardens will reopen soon, perhaps by Oct. 1.

NOW THEN . . . With all their excess verbiage on the Toyota Grand Prix at Laguna Seca Raceway last weekend, The Bland and the TV stations failed to cover the key feature.

We're talking, of course, about the training table. In other words, where did the winning motor jockey chow down? Inquiring motorheads want to know.

THE ANSWER is that winner Alex Zanardi carboed up both nights in a row at Maureen Signorelli's Pasta Mia restaurant in Pacific Grove!

He had puttanesca (a spicy pasta with olives, anchovies and capers) one night, and risotto with pear the other.

ALL you young, prospective motorheads should ask your mothers to feed you grub like that every night! Or better yet, get her to take you to Pasta Mia every night!

Michael Andretti, who finished ninth in the race but second for the season, ate at the Fish Ranch in the Crossroads, but apparently blundered by failing to order puttanesca or risotto with pear. Halibut just doesn't do it. Tough break.

AS they say around the track, "Gentlemen, start your enzymes."

SPEAKING of TV coverage, Ken Peterson caught KCBA with its pants down Friday night!

Well actually it wasn't KCBA's pants that were down, but it was an unwitting accomplice to airing the event.

WHILE doing live news shots at spectator camping sites at Laguna Seca that night, KCBA inadvertently showed a man in the background MOONING the camera!

It was not a pretty sight. In fact, the fella would have been better served if he had spent the weekend at a Jenny Craig retreat, rather than there at the Coors retreat. Thankfully, at least it happened well after the dinner hour.

KCBA learned that evening that doing a live telecast at night from a campground of racing fans carries with it incredible risks!

Sand castle contest slated for Sept. 22

THE THEME of Carmel's 35th Annual Great Sand Castle contest, which will be held Sunday, Sept. 22 on Carmel Beach, is "Wonderland by the Sea." Registration for the free event takes place at 7 a.m. with judging beginning around 1 p.m.

This contest is cosponsored by the American Institute of Architects, Monterey Bay Chapter and the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea Recreation Commission.

The theme was chosen by elementary and middle school students. Grand Champion Raffaella Abbriano won $150, and the two runners up, Kate Howard, who entered "Art in the Sand" and Dylan Fitzpatrick, who submitted "Sand Dollars," each won $50.

More information: 626-1255.

Carmel students gear up for 24-Hour Relay

By KRISTI BELCAMINO

SOME 500 Carmel middle school and high school students will be pulling an all-nighter this month when they spend 24 hours at the Carmel High School track field in a demonstration of their commitment to healthy, drug-free lifestyles.

The Third Annual 24-hour Relay Challenge, sponsored by Community Against Substance Abuse and the Carmel Unified School District, kicks off at 8 a.m., Saturday, Sept. 21.

The relay event consists of teams of 10 with two adult coaches who take turns, one by one, circling the Carmel High School track. While they are waiting their turn, students can play a number of games, socialize with friends or listen to one of a handful of rock and blues bands slated to perform from noon to 5:15 p.m.

Relay participants seek a $40 sponsorship from businesses or members of the community. An entire team can be sponsored for $400. And, of course, larger donations are welcome.

Previous relays have raised more than $22,000, which has gone back to the community as funding for Sober Grad Night, Youth to Youth, Peer Counseling and other community services benefiting youth.

Besides celebrating the community commitment to education and the benefits of a drug-free lifestyle, the relay also encourages parent participation.

"There is strong evidence that these community-wide programs increase parent involvement, and this is shown to increase students success in schools," said Charlotte Noyes, co-director of the event.

Another benefit of the night is that students have the opportunity to interact with teachers and principals in a relaxed, fun setting, said Noyes.

Relay at a glance

THE THIRD Annual 24-Hour Relay Challenge kicks off at 8 a.m., Saturday, Sept. 21 and lasts until 9 a.m. on Sunday, Sept. 22.

Here is a schedule of the events:
Saturday, Sept. 21

8 a.m. — Community pancake breakfast hosted by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Kiwanis at Carmel High School. Adults $4 and children $2.

9 a.m. — Parade down Ocean Avenue to Monte Verde and back up to Carmel High School.

10 a.m. — Opening Ceremonies and beginning of relay.

12 p.m. to 5:15 p.m. — Live music from Vera, Foamscape, Woodshop, 3:16 Red and Fires of Change.

Sunset — Campus closed to non-participants.

Sunday, Sept. 22

9 a.m. — Final lap and awards ceremony.

More information: Charlotte Noyes, 624-8628 or Janet Myer, 626-8681.

In addition, the relay helps students establish a feeling of ownership and loyalty to their school.

"It helps the school become a community rather than just a place to go and crack the books," said Noyes.

Noyes said community involvement is an important aspect of the relay.

"It sends the message that the community cares about how the students are doing," she said. "When the community cares about the schools, students tend to be more in favor of them, too."

Above the Bottom Line

By JAMES P. CALANDRA, CPA

Be informed: Congress changes tax laws

DURING THE first week of August, Congress hurriedly passed several pieces of legislation and then recessed for the summer.

The bills included a small business tax item and health-insurance reform. The centerpiece of the small business bill is a provision increasing deductions for equipment purchases made by small businesses.

Currently, businesses can deduct up to $17,500 for equipment in the year of purchase. That limit will be raised to $18,000 in 1997 and then to $25,000 in 2003.

The bill increases the minimum wage to $4.75 effective Oct. 1, with an additional increase to $5.15 scheduled for Sept. 1, 1997.

A group of expired tax breaks were extended by the bill. Some of the rules that apply to "S" corporations will change, including an increase in the number of shareholders allowed.

The bill also delays for six months the effective date for full implementation of the requirement that businesses make federal tax deposits electronically. Employers who deposited more than $50,000 in taxes in 1995 were scheduled to begin electronic deposits by Jan. 1. That deadline has been moved to July 1.

Beginning in 1997, deductible IRA contributions of up to $2,000 will be allowed for each spouse, including a homemaker who does not work outside the home, so long as the combined compensation of both spouses is at least equal to the contributed amount.

The health insurance reform bill increases the amount that self-employed individuals can deduct for the cost of health insurance. The current 30 percent deduction limit increases to 40 percent in 1997 and then gradually increases to 80 percent by 2006.

Tax breaks are provided to encourage the purchase of insurance, and the bill also establishes a four-year pilot project to test tax-deductible medical savings accounts.

Keep your eye on the dog, not the tail

Some tax-cutting strategies make good financial sense; Others are simply bad ideas, often because tax considerations are allowed to override basic economics.

Here's one example of the tax tail wagging the economic dog.

Let's say that you run an unincorporated consulting business. You want some additional tax write-off, so you decide to buy $10,000 of office furniture that you don't really need. If you're in the 28 percent bracket and you deduct the entire cost, this purchase will trim your tax bill by $2,800 (28 percent of $10,000).

But even after the tax break, you'll still be out-of-pocket $7,200 ($10,000 minus $2,800) — and stuck with furniture that you don't need.

There are other situations in which people often focus on tax considerations and ignore the bigger financial picture. For example:

- Someone increases the size of a home mortgage, solely to get a larger interest deduction.
- A homeowner hesitates to pay off a mortgage, just to keep the interest write-off.
- Someone turns down extra income, because it might push them into a higher tax bracket.
- An investor holds an appreciated asset indefinitely, solely to avoid paying the capital gains tax.

As a general rule, the best tax strategies are those that generate a deduction and leave you in control of your money.

This is what happens, for example, with IRA, Keogh and 401(k) plans. Strategies that result in tax deferral can also be desirable, since you get to pay your tax bill years from now in cheaper, inflated dollars.

Tax-cutting strategies are almost always part of a bigger financial picture. If you are planning any tax-related moves, make sure that everything stays in focus.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams
To employees leaving jobs, getting retirement money in a lump sum seems like a bonanza. Such offers are increasing to those who change jobs, are "downsized" or reach retirement age. More companies are offering lump sums to save costs of processing checks monthly. How do recipients use the lump sums? A study of 60,000 families found about one in three recipients spent the money on cars or other products or to pay education, medical and other expenses. Some invested in a business, bought a home or repaid debt. Only one in five put the money into an IRA to continue saving for retirement expenses.

Paul Mellon is known for his philanthropic contributions totaling $1 billion but he's not finished. At 88, Mellon and his wife donated 85 art masterpieces by Degas, Picasso, Manet, Gauguin and others to Washington's National Gallery of Art. The works' value is estimated at more than $50 million. The museum, incidentally, was founded by Mellon's father.

Carmel looks ahead to Harbor after opening game loss

■ Carmel and Monterey's first meeting in a decade ends in a 39-24 win for the Toreadores

By SCOTT A. BROWN

IT TRULY was the best of times and the worst of times for Carmel's varsity football squad Friday.

In the first half of this clash of Dickensian proportion, which boasted the first meeting of Carmel and Monterey since 1986, the Toreadores needed three hands to contain the Padres.

Carmel got on the board first with a 42-yard scoring strike from Golden Anderson to Robbie Shepner. R.J. Whitfill's extra point made the score 7-0.

Looking dominant, Carmel scored on its next possession, a 1-yard touchdown run by Ben Armbrust to complete a four play drive. After a touchdown run by Monterey's quarterback Nason Campbell, Armbrust answered after the quarter break on a 22-yard run. A two-point conversion made the score 21-0 Carmel.

The bad times began, however, upon the entrance of the Toreadore's star junior quarterback J.J. Sherrill, who had been sidelined for most of the first half for disciplinary reasons. His 50-yard bomb to Titan Mann on Sherrill's first play from scrimmage began a streak of 30 unanswered points.

Whitfill added a 17-yard field goal in the fourth quarter to make the score 32-24. But neither of the two late Carmel drives exceeded three plays, and Monterey's Marcus Suber scored on a 21-yard run to cap a 39-24 Toreadore victory.

"I was real happy with our effort for the most part," said second year Padre coach Mike Kelly. "Most teams won't be as big at the line or as strong at the skill positions as Monterey was."

On Saturday the Padres will face a Harbor football team that defeated them last year 35-0. "To win we need to keep the ball longer," said Kelly. "To control the ball, instead of have three plays and out, we need to run a little better and have less turnovers (they had four against Monterey)."

Against Monterey, Armbrust carried the ball 15 times for 61 yards. Junior JoJo Grewell added 22 yards, and Andersen 23.

Harbor may not be as strong at the skill positions as they were last year, having lost to graduation quarterback Colin Puese, tailback Chris DaCosta and linebacker Mike Allegri.

They do, however, return backs Cody Muhly and Marko Soltero. Defensively, Harbor features linebacker Justin Lowell and defensive back John Bullock.

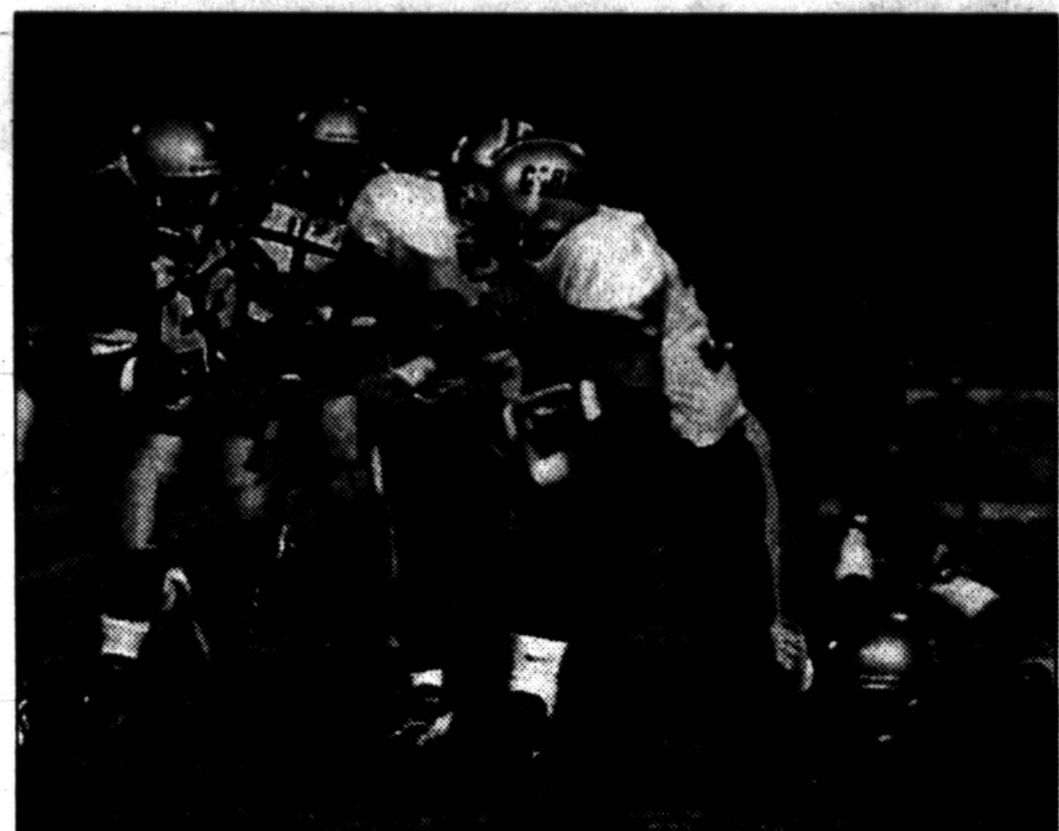

"Our offense is pretty spread," said Tim Tramp, who is in his third year as Harbor's head coach. "We show a bunch of looks with a lot of misdirection plays. Basically, you'd call us a West Coast offense."

"Defensively, we run a 50 defense, with five down linemen and two linebackers. We show lots of movement and lots of looks. We don't let anyone get used to any particular set."

Harbor began last season with four victories, including wins over the Padres and Stevenson, before losing six straight in the Santa Cruz County Athletic League.

"I don't expect to dominate (Carmel) like we did last year," said Tramp. "Golden Andersen tore up his knee in our game last year. I know this year they'll play a wide open game."

NOTE: Carmel's junior varsity team, coached by Mark Spindler, lost to Monterey's JV 26-6. Carmel received strong offensive play from running back Ed Canadas, and quarterback Dario Verga scored their only touchdown on a keeper.

Defensively, the Padres held the Toreadores to only six points in the first half. They were led by linemen Johan Berlin and Sal Buffo.

FORMER CARMEL High baseball star Rick Prieto was named the Western Baseball League's Player of the Year.

Prieto, an outfielder and second baseman for the Salinas Peppers, was among league leaders in most major offensive categories, including batting average (sixth, .338), runs (first, 83), hits (first, 123), doubles (tied for third, 27), stolen bases (fifth, 30), and on-base percentage (fifth, .410).

Defensively, Prieto played 54 games in the outfield without an error. He played 34 games at second base, as well.

Prieto, who graduated from CHS in 1988, was the only player to be named Western Baseball League Player of the Week twice this season.

The Harmon Football Forecast, one of the country's most popular sports features, will appear in The Carmel Pine Cone each week during the 1996 football season. Now in its 40th year, the Harmon Forecast is published in more than 225 newspapers across the country.

Jim Harmon uses a mathematical formula to determine ratings for each of the nearly 700 college and pro football teams he follows each fall. And, though boasting a forecasting accuracy equal to any in the nation, the Harmon Forecast makes no wild claims of unbelievable guessing percentages. Harmon has a proven accuracy over the past 39 years of between 73 and 78 percent for college predictions and 61 to 75 percent for NFL picks.

The Almost Tolerable Fitness Column

By BILL BURLEIGH

Questions and answers about Fine Arts 5K race

YOU MAY have heard that walking is as good for you as running, and there are fewer injuries with walking. So why run?

The above is almost true. Most of the goals of exercise can be met by walking: lower blood pressure, cholesterol and pulse rate, weight loss, stronger bones, stress reduction and sense of well being.

But walking doesn't build up the heart as well as running. Most walkers do not reach the increased heart rate of aerobic exercise, unless they are beginners or walking briskly up a hill.

Even the very slow runner is building up that major muscle, the heart, during activity. And the runner is more likely to enjoy a euphoric high than the walker. The runner reduces and relieves stress better and faster than does the walker.

But, if running is too unpleasant, by all means walk! Any form of vertical activity will improve your life and longevity.

We have had some questions about the Carmel Fine Arts 5K that I would like to answer. First, if we are raising money for open space preservation, why are we paying out $2,000 in prize money?

I firmly believe that in order to succeed as a legitimate sporting event, we must be professional. Part of a professional sporting event is having professional, accomplished athletes providing, in our case, faster times. It's a fact of life that the prize money races enjoy the best athletes, and the more prize money we have, the better the athletes that will compete.

Last year's Fine Arts 5K was written up in the California running publications because we had good athletes. Without prize money we probably would have been ignored by both good athletes and the media.

Media attention leads to popularity, which leads to increased interest in participation — by both individuals and sponsors. Recognition is mighty important to the sponsor in getting them to support an event. And in this case, more sponsor participation means more money for open space.

The same philosophy applies to other aspects of the Fine Arts 5K. We have the best printing available and our signs are creative and professionally made. We provide timing and scoring by the best professional organizations available. Our brunch is catered by a great company called A Moveable Feast. The list goes on and on.

Until next week, Happy Feet, and keep up your 20 minutes of walking or running, three times a week.

Setting the record straight

REFERRING TO last week's (Sept. 5) Football '96 Preview:

■ Carmel High School was referred to as having won 12 games over the last 7 seasons. In fact, CHS has won 22 games over that span.

■ Monterey High School linebacker Ryan Oyama was referred to as Roger.

We apologize for these errors.

Dominic Boitano and his Stevenson teammates prepare to face Santa Cruz in their season opener Saturday.

Commentary

Lessons of overcommercialization before our eyes

By David Maradei

TO GET an idea of one possible future for Carmel, just get in your car and take a late afternoon ride to the mouth of the Valley. There you will find a perfect example of uncontrolled and unregulated land use planning.

What caused that traffic mess? Three areas of our public process failed.

The people who served on the Monterey County Board of Supervisors and the County Planning Commission failed to plan and control the potential traffic volume on our local highways. Business is allowed to grow and expand without restrictions throughout the valley.

Major new home developments are in the approval process without regard to the cumulative impact on the general area. The results are obvious: more employees, more cars, more residents, greater delays, more pressure to build the Hatton Canyon Freeway, more strain on our limited water reserves.

Traffic trigger mechanisms in the Carmel Valley Master Plan that would halt development and stop adding to the traffic volume are ignored. We have lost a part of the quality of our lives.

Focus right here

This column, though, is not about Monterey County. It is about Carmel-by-the-Sea. What has happened there can happen to us.

We have been told by our elected officials over the past several years that Carmel is broke and that the only solution we have to is to advertise to attract more visitors to what the Carmel Business Association has proudly regards as the world's largest outdoor mall.

More visitors means more cars, more tour buses, more tourist-oriented retail stores — more of everything for a small town already overburdened with an intense tourist industry. There are few voices that rise opposing this rush to get a piece of the lucrative tourist dollar.

We are a community that struggles to maintain the charm that has drawn many of us to make our lives here. That charm is threatened by the promotion of business rather than the steadfast adherence to a General Plan philosophy that stresses the value of maintaining ourselves as a residential community.

The result is chaos. Our General Plan is ignored. The pro-more-business city council majority had advocated and supported Measure H (1993 rezoning) that expanded the commercial district benefiting a few landowners while attempting to streamline the permit process. Clearly Measure H has failed.

The Council unwittingly gave up control over commercial uses throughout the village.

Bakeries have turned themselves into take-out fast food restaurants without going through any public process. Restaurants have added deli uses, though it is not within their permitted uses. Rules are ignored because the council is perceived as tolerant of code violations. Several businesses have had live music entertainment in the evenings although prohibited by law.

Formerly small restaurants have become mega-seating eateries. Illegal advertising can be found on every commercial block. Still, the Council bends over backwards to accommodate and promote additional business.

There are other indications that the residential values of the General Plan are being ignored by the council majority.

Stop signs are popping up like weeds on every other corner. The General Plan specifically restricts unnecessary signage, but the stop signs continue to sprout though there are no safety issues demanding the littering of our community with stop signs.

Plastic street signs with press-on letters are replacing our wooden ones. Resident-serving businesses are being replaced by tourist-oriented businesses. Chain retail stores are beginning to dominate the market, destroying our small village character. Council policy now reveals that banners displaying advertising slogans and organizational logos are more desirable in the green gardens of our Ocean Avenue center islands than the trees and shrubs that they obscure.

The direction of Carmel-by-the-Sea, confused and in conflict since the 1986, needs to be re-evaluated. The residents and business persons living in Carmel need to come together again to create a new General Plan that will redefine our goals and our future. We need to hear from the many voices of the residents of Carmel who will tell us where we have been right and where we are going wrong. Then we need a council that will listen to those voices.

I am asking each of you to join me in this call for a new General Plan Committee to be established by the Carmel City Council. During that time of self-evaluation it would make sense for the Council to draw back from additional commercial expansion and development.

We need to take a deep breath free from the mounting pressures of disappearing water reserves, uncontrolled growth, increasing traffic congestion, and limited parking. It will be a time for us to look at ourselves and see if we are on track to fulfill the ideals and meet the challenges of the millennium.

Reduce Fort Ord reuse

Dear Editor:

In light of the recent extensions of the deadline for comments on the four-volume E.I.R. on Fort Ord Reuse, I am compelled to write this letter and encourage anyone who has a genuine concern for our natural resources and environment to take the time and get involved.

The Fort Ord Reuse Authority by now is well aware that the citizens throughout Monterey County are not supportive of the grandiose "reuse plan."

Proof of this is in FORA's recent actions to extend the deadline for comments on the plan. In so doing, they have admitted that they are well aware of the communities' concern over the massive plan, which calls for 22,000 homes, 12 million square feet of commercial space, and over 71,000 people at build-out.

Supporters will explain that it is unlikely that the population will ever increase to 71,000 people. Well, we know from experience, once it is approved, then the opportunity exists.

I am calling for the Fort Ord Reuse Plan to be reduced so that the final build-out does not involve any increase in population compared to the population of the military base during the installation's highest year: 35,000.

The reasons are twofold:

First, Fort Ord today has tremendous infrastructure inadequacies. Our elected officials will be remiss if they ignore the inability for the base to support a larger population and increase development in terms of water and transportation.

Second, there is a countywide concern to protect and preserve our community so that we are not overrun with rampant development.

The Monterey Peninsula has taken special care in reviewing all aspects of growth in our surrounding community, and we should not ignore the need to preserve our quality of life. Protection of our natural environment is a critical component of our community and one that we must consider when we look at Fort Ord Reuse.

We need to scale the Fort Ord Reuse plan down significantly. We cannot just sit back and permit the plan to move forward with such long term impacts on our Peninsula and County.

A word to Joe

Dear Editor:

I am responding to Mr. Fitzpatrick's column which appeared in the Aug. 22 issue of the Carmel Pine Cone.

I shall try to gently again explain to Mr. Fitzpatrick that the sport of rodeo does not abuse its animals.

Animal athletes who engage in active physical sport are sometimes hurt, or even killed. Examples would include horse racing, a wide variety of hunter/jumper/horse show events, and rodeo as well. The point is that while these unfortunate things occur, they are not planned or intended by the participants, either human or animal.

A 1993-94 survey conducted of twenty-eight PRCA rodeos indicated that the injury rate for animals was statistically negligible. Of the 33,991 animals that entered the arenas, just 16 were injured as compiled by on-site veterinarians. A 1988 survey indicated that of 6,933 outings, just 12 animals were injured. Even the injury rate in calf roping, which is the event we hear the most about, has dropped very significantly.

The PRCA is deeply involved in animal welfare. The rule book contains sixty rules to insure humane treatment of the stock; all PRCA sanctioned rodeos have on-site judges; veterinarians are on-site at all PRCA rodeos; educational, humane and rules seminars are conducted on a scheduled basis for contestants and committees; youth seminars are conducted by the PRCA four times per year; a PRCA committee meets at least three times per year to review humane issues; the American Association of Equine Practitioners and the American Association of Bovine Practitioners have issued a guide to rodeo veterinarians.

Last, but not least, old Joe hits the pinnacle of ignorance when he states that the flank strap, which is a fleece-lined belt-like piece of equipment, is placed over the animals' genitals. That is not true.

Remembering Les

Dear Editor:

How sad to learn of Les Fulgham's passing, yet heartening to read that many feel he was more than simply the Barber of Carmel.

He was the first of my colleagues to welcome me when I began my practice here in the village seven years ago and told me then to call upon him at any time if he could be of help.

How ironic that my wife Margaretha was herself called upon by Les for rehabilitative therapy a few months ago at Community Hospital when Les courageously needed help himself.

Les was a man who enjoyed philosophy and an aphoristic phrase so I would like to quote two for him posthumously:

"Our very meeting with each other is an omen." (Archilochos)

"Someone, I'm bold enough to say, will remember us in time hereafter." (Sappho)

Water conservation together

Dear Editor:

A unique partnership is proposed for the Monterey Peninsula that will enable the Federal sector to implement cost-effective water conservation projects.

These projects will help water users in the Monterey Peninsula area meet water conservation goals set by the State Water Resources Control Board.

The U.S. Department of Energy's Federal Energy Management Program is facilitating this partnership between the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, the Presidio of Monterey, the Naval Support Activity-Monterey Bay, Coast Guard Station of Monterey Bay, the city of Monterey, the California Department of Water Resources, and the Federal Energy Management Program.

A signing ceremony, marking the formation of this partnership, took place Wednesday, Sept. 4, at a luncheon at the U.S. General Services Administration's Energy and Environmental Conference in Monterey.

Based on a state water board order last July, the Peninsula's major water purveyor, California American Water Company, was directed to reduce its use of Carmel Valley water resources by 20 percent in water year 1997 and each subsequent year.

The Federal agencies in the partnership have already been involved in many water conservation projects.

Current water conservation activities include the installation of nearly 300 ultra-low flush toilets at the Naval facilities, with another 200 installations obligated for fiscal year 1997.

The Navy also provides low-flow showerheads for its housing facilities and is currently launching the use of a water conservation kit, which includes sink aerators for the kitchen and bath.

The Navy plans to distribute 2,500 kits. Also notable is the fact that approximately 95 percent of the irrigation at the Navy school is done with water from Del Monte Lake.

The Presidio of Monterey has retrofitted four large barracks with water-restricting devices, installed low-flow plumbing fixtures in one of its eight academic buildings, and uses xeriscaping techniques to limit water use in landscaping.

Based on estimates of savings from expanding installations of ultra-low flush toilets only, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District estimates that the savings potential is between 100 and 130 acre-feet per year, or 15 percent to 20 percent reduction for these facilities.

COUNCIL

tives of a design firm showed up at city hall and told city officials of their plans to erect the structure.

"They have refused every step of the way to provide us with information," Gustin said. "They just went on their merry way. After meeting with us for 20 minutes, they considered it a done deal."

Gustin said the city is fighting the project by citing federal environmental laws he claims would be broken if the firm proceeds as planned.

Leah Hernikl, a planner from R & G, Inc., a design firm that has placed a bid with the City of Carmel to erect a telecommunications structure, told City Council that not all structures have to be ugly.

"There are many creative solutions for creating an antenna," Hernikl said. "The idea of a tall manacle with big arms is not your only choice."

She told council her company could "incorporate the antenna into the architectural features" of the Pacific Bell building in downtown Carmel, located at the southwest corner of Seventh and Junipero.

Reactions

Speaking for the Carmel Residents Association

Constance Wright said she supports the urgency ordinance.

"The presence of a 150-foot antenna would severely detract from the city's character," Wright said.

Chris Tescher, a home builder, questioned the city's interference with a matter he said should come before the people.

"By nature, I'm very suspicious of urgency ordinances," Tescher said.

Councilman Bob Fischer, chairing the meeting for Ken White, reminded the audience that an urgency ordinance lasts only 45 days.

Expressing concerns

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac agreed with Tescher about the dubious nature of urgency ordinances. Before voting in favor of the ordinance, she demanded to see a report in 45 days from the city staff members, who have requested the ordinance to conduct research on wireless telecommunications.

"I want to know how this will affect private residents and businesses," she said.

During the next 44 days, City Administrator Jere

This is the design for the proposed tower that would be located at the Pacific Bell building at the southwest corner of Seventh and Junipero. City officials oppose the construction of a device that would destroy the character of Carmel.

Kersnar and the Planning Department will combine efforts with the Regional Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG) to devise an alternative plan that would consider the region as a single unit to receive telecommunications services.

"The staff is in contact with AMBAG, and we are developing collectively a model and policies with other cities," Kersnar told council.

In a separate interview, Livingston said the staff would also research health issues relating to high-tension cables.

"Property values, aesthetics and health" are primary issues of concern relating to telecommunications cables coming to Carmel, she said.

A New Twist...

La Playa's Garden Party adds art to popular annual mix

□ Proceeds benefit Carmel's Forest Hill Park Renovation Project.

By BETH PENNEY

LA PLAYA Hotel in Carmel adds another facet to its popular Garden Party this year when it incorporates art into its offering of local wines, gourmet food, live jazz and, of course, appreciation of gardens.

"This year we're moving away from the 'how-to,'" said La Playa general manager Tom Glidden, "and adding art for the first time."

The sixth annual Garden Party is scheduled for this Sunday, Sept. 15, from noon to 4 p.m. Tickets are $25 per person at the door, and proceeds benefit a brand-new cause: Carmel's Forest Hill Park Renovation Project.

The artists

Three artists will be featured at this year's event. Letty DeLoatch, Yosemite National Park's resident artist, works out of a studio there that was built by Chris Jorgensen, the same man who built La Playa.

According to Glidden, DeLoatch came to Carmel to see the hotel because of her interest in Jorgensen's work, and is now the featured artist in the hotel's advertising material. The works she will show at the Garden Party are her depictions of La Playa's gardens.

Local artist Ann Walbert also will display her interpretations of gardens on Sunday. Walbert was recently hired to create original artwork for La Playa's guest rooms, all of which will undergo renovation starting in December, according to Glidden.

The third featured artist is Noe Hinojosa, who has been a La Playa employee for 17 years.

"Noe has his own vision of the garden," Glidden said. "We're thrilled to be able to show artwork done by one of our own people."

Glidden said that the hotel and its restaurant, the Terrace Grill, have made an effort to focus on "the wonderful wine producers in our back yard."

This focus extends, he said, to the Central Coast, resulting in an array of wines from local wineries as well as those from as far away as Santa Barbara.

La Playa's chef, Bunyan Fortune, will offer a provocative menu during the afternoon that includes unusual combinations of international food and preparation methods, such as Mesquite Grilled Teriyaki Chicken, Mediterranean Quesadillas, Nori Rolls with Seafood Armenian Lavosh, and a variety of "Garden Confections."

La Playa Hotel's garden party, featuring garden strolls, live jazz, local wines and gourmet food will this year raise money for Carmel's Forest Hill Park Renovation Project, which has yet to get underway.

Music will be provided throughout the afternoon by the Scott and Peggy Brown Duo. La Playa's head gardener, Sara Henderson, will be on hand to answer questions about her development and care of La Playa gardens.

Renovating Forest Hill Park

The La Playa's annual Garden Party has always raised funds to support local arts and cultural activities. This year, Glidden said, the recipient of part of the Garden Party's proceeds is really still "just a conception" of which many locals are not yet aware.

"Mayor Ken White is looking for financial vehicles to renovate a park in the woods in upper Carmel," Glidden explained. "This year's Garden Party will provide the seed money for the project."

Forest Hill Park, Glidden says, is on the west side of the intersection where Camino del Monte meets Junipero, just south of the statue of Father Junipero Serra. The Carmel Rotary Club is also involved in the project, he said.

Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary to host party for public

PENINSULA STAFF REPORT

A FREE environmental fair is planned from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday when the fourth anniversary celebration for the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary takes place at Shoreline Park in Monterey.

The Sanctuary was designated in September 1992 as the nation's largest protected marine region, stretching from Marin County to San Luis Obispo County.

At the environmental fair, visitors can touch live marine animals, learn about native plants and underwater photography, find out how to compost yard waste and garbage, and take part in dozens of hands-on activities for kids and adults.

Entertainment begins at 10:30 a.m. with storytelling, plus singing by local schoolchildren. Blues band Red Beans & Rice performs from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Kids can have their faces painted from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Remarks from dignitaries begin at 1 p.m., followed by the cutting and serving of birthday cake to all in attendance.

Additional information: 647-4255.

THEATER REVIEW

By putting modern spin on classic tale, Pac Rep makes Shakespeare more accessible

By MARK SHILSTONE-LAURENT

WHEN I was driving my kids' babysitter home the other night, she asked which play I had seen for my review. I told her it was a Shakespeare play.

She scrunched up her nose and said, "Too bad. I just don't get it."

Her comment was a version of good old "accessibility" question with Shakespeare — that is, "Do I understand what's going on, and if I do, can I relate to it in the '90s?"

If you want accessible Shakespeare, check out the current sizzling production of Henry IV, Part One at Pacific Repertory Theatre's Golden Bough Playhouse in Carmel.

Director Stephen Moorer has mounted a fine production of what many consider to be one of Shakespeare's finest and — here's that word again — most accessible plays.

Henry is the story of a young Prince Hal (John Farmanesh) which chronicles his drinking days with Sir John Falstaff (John Rousseau) and his eventual maturation into an honorable heir to the crown worn by his father, Henry the Fourth (Ron Cohen).

Two plots

There are two plots at work here — the comedic one featuring Hal and his relationship with Falstaff and the rustics at The Boar's Head Inn — and the historical one, which sets up the eventual battle for power between Hal and the rebel Hotspur (Kevin Nolan Caston). Those who get bogged down in the historical plot only have to wait a few scenes for the funny fat guy to return.

A lot of the actors who were in Moorer's first Shakespeare productions many moons ago are here in Henry. But here's the difference:

Perfect casting

Moorer has cast this play to perfection. All these good actors who we've watched over the years have been rightly and wrongly cast in the past, but in Henry they are all exactly where they should be, and the play, as a result, sparkles.

Farmanesh devours the role of Hal. You can see his fingerprints all over this production — underscoring, fight choreography, text work, associate directing. He chews this up as if he'd been studying it for years, all in preparation for when the time was right.

Well, the time is right. Don't miss this because we'll all soon be saying, "Yeah, I'm cool, I saw John Farmanesh before he got famous."

Carrying one of the other two main parts is Pacific Rep co-founder John Rousseau. The role of Sir John Falstaff is one of Shakespeare's most coveted.

A fat, untidy old man, not above running away from danger, hardly seems ripe to be one of the most beloved characters in theater history. But Rousseau brings his considerable talents and charm to the role and we quickly understand why. He has a ball with it and so do we.

The third major part is the upstart rebel Hotspur, who after suffering what he considers to be a rebuke from King Henry, allies with other rebels in an attempt to take the crown.

Kevin Nolan Caston chews up and spits out Shakespeare's verse with the best of them, and his performance as Hotspur is no exception. The fiery Hotspur allows him to show off his many and varied skills. It's a showcase performance by a fine Shakespearean

Ivy's League

By Ivy Weston

As someone who's lived here since the age of 10, attending Carmel Woods School, Carmel Middle School, Carmel High School (Class of '88) and Monterey Peninsula College, it's been a treat for me to be able to serve the local community in my current position. But the time is ripe for a move to the Bay Area, where there are more people my age and numerous career opportunities.

My new job as Assistant Content Editor at inquiry.com will teach me the World Wide Web editing and design skills I will need for my future in the rapidly-changing media/publishing business.

I'd like to thank all of my free-lance writers for being such hard workers, great writers and terrific people to know. You've made my job easy by being so reliable and willing to take assignments on short notice — and always handing them in on time!

To the the movers and shakers in the arts community without whose hard work and dedication there would be no local arts scene, I'd also like to say thanks for working with me. I've enjoyed getting to know each of you.

My colleagues, The Pine Cone/Times staff, I'll miss you the most. Your support, kindness and friendship are invaluable, and you've taught me so much.

Doug, you've been the best "boss" I've ever had. Patti, you're a terrific general manager. I don't know how you keep your cool all the time, but I admire you!

I'll be home to visit often, as my family and most of my friends live here. I hope to keep writing for the Peninsula section on a free-lance basis.

So long, everybody!

With its choice of dining indoors or under the redwoods in the patio, a selection of 10 eggs Benedict varieties, plus French toast, waffles, pancakes and blintzes, Katy's Place leaves no one hungry.

Katy's Place welcomes families. Parties of eight or more can call ahead and the team at Katy's Place will get a big table ready. There is a toy basket for the wee ones, and handicapped access is very easy.

Owner Ari Georgsson, former executive chef of The Covey at Quail Lodge, is a true stickler for quality. He serves only freshly squeezed orange and grapefruit juices, fresh berries on those blintzes, blue ribbon corned beef hash and extra thick Hormel Black Label bacon. The menu runs from light to hearty.

Katy's Place is also open daily for lunch. In addition to the breakfast choices, you may also order salads, the popular calamari jack burger, and other delights.

Katy's Place opens at 7 a.m. every day except Christmas. It's on Mission between Fifth and Sixth, Carmel. Call 624-0199.

HENRY

Others of Moor's old guard cast in ideal roles include Ron Cohen as King Henry, Michael Jacobs as Bardolph and Mindy Stock as Mistress Quickly. All are wonderful.

And this is not to say the rest of the cast falls off — the performances range from solid to inspired, across the board.

As for Moor, he has helped keep the play fresh with an interesting "concept." And it is an unadulterated success.

He has set the rustic scenes in a classic Elizabethan style, but the court scenes are set in the present. This blending of broadswords and Uzi guns works masterfully. The pacing and staging are also solid, Moor turning in one of his best directing stints ever.

To pick a few nits, there are some very minor problems. The resolve that helps shift the various settings is overused in Act Two and tends to dampen the momentum of the last quarter of the play. And Rousseau's diction has a tendency to slip occasionally.

Finally, the numerous fight sequences, although wonderfully choreographed, didn't have the precision and crispness that they eventually will.

These problems are small and are overwhelmed by the production's positive aspects.

The technical support is great, especially the lighting and the underscoring. It's just a very fine theatrical package all the way through.

If you've had trouble getting comfortable with Shakespeare in the past, do yourself a favor and take in

Henry.

And if you're an old Shakespeare veteran, go see one of his finest works in a visually arresting and totally "accessible" production.

Performances of Henry IV, Part I take place at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 13, 14, 15, 26 and at 2 p.m. Sept. 22, 29 at the Golden Bough Playhouse, Montre Verde between Eighth and Ninth, Carmel. Admission is $15 general, $10 students/teachers/seniors/military. Phone 622-0700.

"HOUSE TALK" is a new feature in The Carmel Pine Cone and Monterey Times, and this is its premiere edition.

House Talk

By Paul & Nello Brocchini

In each column, we will update readers on what is happening in the Carmel real estate market.

The definition of Carmel in these columns is the one used by our local multiple listing service (MLS) and includes:

- Carmel-by-the-Sea
- Carmel Woods
- Carmel Point
- Hatton Fields
- Carmel Mission (including Mission Fields and the area near River School)

- North and South Carmel Hills
- Carmel Meadows
- High Meadows, and

■ Jack's Peak.

Why Jack's Peak is classified as Carmel rather than Monterey in the MLS is a mystery to us. But it is, so when we develop statistics about Carmel real estate, Jack's Peak is part of the package.

We expect that many readers will not know exactly where all of the areas are. If some are a bit hazy to you, don't despair, as we will tell you where they are in future issues.

We have also developed some of our own jargon regarding neighborhoods.

The chic south of Ocean neighborhood from Ocean to Santa Lucia and Dolores down to Scenic and Del Mar, for example, we call the Golden Rectangle. This sobriquet is only partially tongue in cheek, as that part of town is by far the most expensive on a square-foot basis.

We also call the people who live there rectangulites which is, we suppose, a lot better than being a square.

Amazing

What can we say about Carmel real estate this year? Maybe "amazing" would be the best way to describe it.

The market has been red hot. There were 69 properties sold in Carmel during the second quarter, an impressive 64 percent gain over the same period last year when 42 properties sold.

Fifty-one sales in a quarter was our former best, scored in the second quarter of 1994, also a very good year. So we can use a cliché and describe the current market as "off the charts" without fear of exaggeration.

Can Carmel keep it up? Since we lack Nostradamus-like talents, we really don't know, but the Carmel market shows no signs of letting up.

Most neighborhoods strong

Most of the village or near-village neighborhoods continue to look strong with the exception of the northwest and south-east.

The neighborhoods of traditional, family-type housing, such as Carmel Mission, Carmel Hills and Hatton Fields, have not, for the most part, shared in the 1996 boom. These areas are not as popular as the village neighborhoods for retirement and second homes.

Let's take a look at the town by areas, starting with the Golden Rectangle, which continues to roll.

As of Aug. 27, there were 32 active listings in the GR are. Ten of those were in escrow, 31.25 percent, an exceedingly high figure. Three of the properties in escrow were under $500,000, four between $500,000 and $1 million, and three of the $11 million+ properties were under contract.

The other areas of Carmel looked like this as of Aug. 27:

■ Carmel Woods: Seven pending sales out of 22 listings, an impressive 31.82 percent, three in the $400,000 and three in the $500,000 ranges and one in the $900,000 range;

■ Southeast Carmel: An exception to the otherwise hot market, with two pending sales out of 24 listings, a weak 11.11 percent, one each in the $300,000 and $500,000 ranges;

■ Northeast Carmel: Four pending sales in 25 listings, a solid 16 percent, one in the $300,000 and three in the $400,000 ranges;

■ Northwest Carmel: Three pending sales out of 27 listings, 11.54 percent, a low number in the current great market, one each in the $400,000, $500,000 and $900,000 ranges;

■ Carmel Point: Four pending sales out of 20 listings, 20 percent, one each in the $400,000 and $500,000 ranges and two over $1 million;

■ Carmel Mission: No sales, out of five listings. This area is slow, only three sales there during the year so far. Two of those were in Mission Fields, which is still recovering from the stigma of the flood.

Mission Fields has a large inventory of remodeled houses, probably the best value in Carmel on a square-footage basis.

■ Hatton Fields: Two pending sales out of 14 listings, 14.29 percent, one each in the $300,000 and $500,000 ranges.

THE CARMEL MARKET BAROMETER

A REGULAR feature of these House Talk columns will be the "Carmel Market Barometer."

The barometer is something we made up seven years ago and has worked well as an indicator of activity. It is a snapshot in time of the percentage of listings that have pending sales on them or, in industry jargon, are "in escrow."

A high percentage means that the activity is good; for instance, a reading above 20 percent is good. The July 1 reading for Carmel was a sluggish 13.63 percent.

But as you will see in the accompanying article, the in-town neighborhoods had very good readings. The overall number was dragged down by the out-of-town areas that are included in the definition "Carmel."

Marina, which has been the hottest market on the Monterey Peninsula for the past several years, had several readings above 50 percent. That was a hot market.

The Golden Rectangle and Carmel Woods recorded levels on Aug. 27 above 30 percent, both excellent readings.

Keep an eye on the barometer. If you see it falling off or picking up, you will find it to be an effective predictor of short-term trends.

■ Carmel Hills: No sales, out of five listings. However, there have been five sales in Carmel Hills this year and the last couple of years have been reasonably strong.

■ High Meadows: One out of nine, or 11.11 percent. Three sales in the area this year to date.

■ Carmel Meadows: No sales, out of five listings. Yet this has been a great year in Carmel Meadows, with one sale in the $600,000 range and three sales of over $1 million!

■ Jack's Peak: One out of nine, or 11.1 percent, and only one sale this year.

Jack's Peak is a market unto itself of high-priced homes. In the best of times, which this year certainly is, Jack's Peak walks to its own drummer. The properties sell, but often it takes time to move them.

We would like this column to be interactive. Please contact us with your questions and comments, and we will respond.

Bobby Rahal holds a magnum of wine while wife Debi thanks Bob Brower, Chateau Julien owner, for the wine at the SCRAM LaGala Seca, which honored the Rahals on Thursday, Sept. 5 at Laguna Seca.

Soroptimists Margo Nottenkamper and Lori Kohn hold up a birdhouse that former Carmel mayor Barney Laiolo made and donated for auction at LaGala Seca.

Monterey businessmen Joe Anastasia and Ron Garabed never miss a race at Laguna Seca. They hold up their glasses in a toast to racing team Bobby and Debi Rahal at the LaGala Seca.

Gospel festival gets Labor Day temperatures rising in CV

WHETHER YOU'RE a believer or not, you couldn't help but be caught up in the passionate fervor of the musicians who sang and played in the Fifth Annual Carmel Valley Gospel Festival held on Labor Day at the Carmel Valley Community Center.

The valley is a splendid place for a festival because the high mountains to the north completely surround it like bastions, and the green, sunny meadow is a lovely place to rest and listen to music.

Themed "He is God of Every Nation, Tribe & Tongue," the festival contained a sparkling variety of musical styles including jazz, rock, pop, blues, inspirational, and rhythm and blues.

Social Spotlight

By Dodie Barkley

Teddy Randazzo, Jr., whose father composed "Goin' Out of My Head" in 1965, sang "Rock and Roll for Jesus," as well as many other religious rock ballads.

Donal White, a professional gospel singer, had the crowd rising and waving their arms in a salute to her psalm-singing. In a lovely high soprano voice, she sang a rousing "Glory, Glory Hallelujah," which brought tremendous applause.

Other acts included Jason Ingram, Rhythm 'n Jesus, Good News Blues Band, Bard Sherman, Ethnos "All-Nations" Band and the Temple of Philadelphia Choir, all of whom donated their talent to the festival.

Arts and crafts booths dotted the landscape, the swimming pool was open to all and a delicious low-cost barbecue was served.

Barbara Sherman, who has coordinated the festival for five years, introduced us to the Rev. Allen Belton, who came all the way from Colorado to be the event's master of ceremonies. Belton also showed all gathered how nice a singing voice he has.

Several hundred listeners on the lawn, children playing games at different booths, the hot dogs, chicken and hamburgers and a few stray dogs made this Labor Day a lovely one to remember.

■ SCRAM shimmers at Laguna Seca

Hey, pals — the Fourth Annual La Gala Seca, held Thursday, Sept. 5, was very much like the races held at Laguna Seca Raceway — no down-shifts, everything in high gear, hundreds of people, and across the finish line came Bobby and Debi Rahal.

All I can say is, the joint was really jumpin'!

The Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula (SCRAM) together with Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay work together each year, hosting the huge event in an immense white tent at Laguna Seca Raceway. All proceeds benefit Monterey County charities, particularly those serving women and children.

SCRAM has donated more than $7 million to 70 charitable organizations and service clubs in the Tri-County area and is responsible for millions of dollars in economic impact.

Soroptimist International is the world's largest service organization for executive and professional women who work in programs for health, education and human rights.

Judy Lofink, Lynn Traynor, Jamie Sweeney and many other soroptimists working at the reception and silent and live auction tables were doing the real work of the gala — serving the public! Co-chairs Paula Scholfield and Charlotte Mosel, take a bow!

At 8 p.m., a toast was raised by masters of ceremonies and auctioneers Paul Page of ABC Sports and Bruce Flanders of Flanders Unlimited, Inc., to honor Indy car driver Bobby Rahal and his wife Debi, known as "Team Rahal."

Bobby, at 43, is an elder statesman on the PPG Tour, but certain drivers say that he is getting better as he gets older. Rahal agrees, saying, "I'm not about to give in to the youngsters yet."

The silent and live auctions were filled with wonderful race car memorabilia, cars, posters, magnums of wine, parasols, sweatshirts and other racing paraphernalia.

Cartoonist Hank Ketcham donated one of his Dennis the Menace Sunday cartoon strips, and former Carmel mayor Barney Laiolo donated one of his wonderful bird houses.

■ Center for Community Advocacy honors Karas

Imagine that you and your family are field workers living in the agricultural fields of the great Salinas Valley, bathing in and drinking the runoff water from the fields.

You're not living like that to send money back home, as has been told to many of us. You're there because

See SOCIAL page 13B

Honorees Sam Karas and Anarbol Garcia admire a poster they received at the CCA First Annual Ben Heller Award for Leadership and Courage event held Friday, Sept. 6 at the Elks Club in Monterey.

SOCIAL EVENTS

you're paid only $6,000 to $8,000 per year.

Now imagine you live in a rundown shack, for which you're paying $500 a month including utilities, and you find that the owner didn't pay the utility company, so your water and power has been shut off.

These and many other horrendous facts were shown on film and spoken about by the president of the Center for Community Advocacy (CCA), Lydia Villarreal, Esq. and by director Vanessa W. Vallarta, Esq. on Friday, Sept. 6 at the CCA First Annual Ben Heller Award for Leadership and Courage event, held at the Elks Club in Monterey.

Monterey County Supervisor Sam Karas, who also told of the outrage he'd felt upon viewing the terrible conditions of immigrant field workers, was the recipient of the award. Karas helped to found the CCA in 1988 and secure crucial funding for it.

When Karas speaks, you can hear the sincerity and passion in his voice.

Rep. Sam Farr, D-Carmel, later in the evening called Karas a passionate man who helped the immigrants gain empowerment. And that is what the CCA is all about.

The CCA visits immigrant field workers and shows them how to be responsible for themselves, and thereby gain simple rights like housing, proper wages and utilities.

The CCA also recognized the Pajaro Village Trailer Park Tenant Committee, led by Anarbol Garcia. By negotiating agreements with the park owner, the committee was able to purchase the park.

Mayors, supervisors, community leaders, ministers and many other civic leaders attended the benefit because Sam Karas' outcry about the field workers, "They're people too," brought them in!

■ Jesters throw bash to benefit art museum

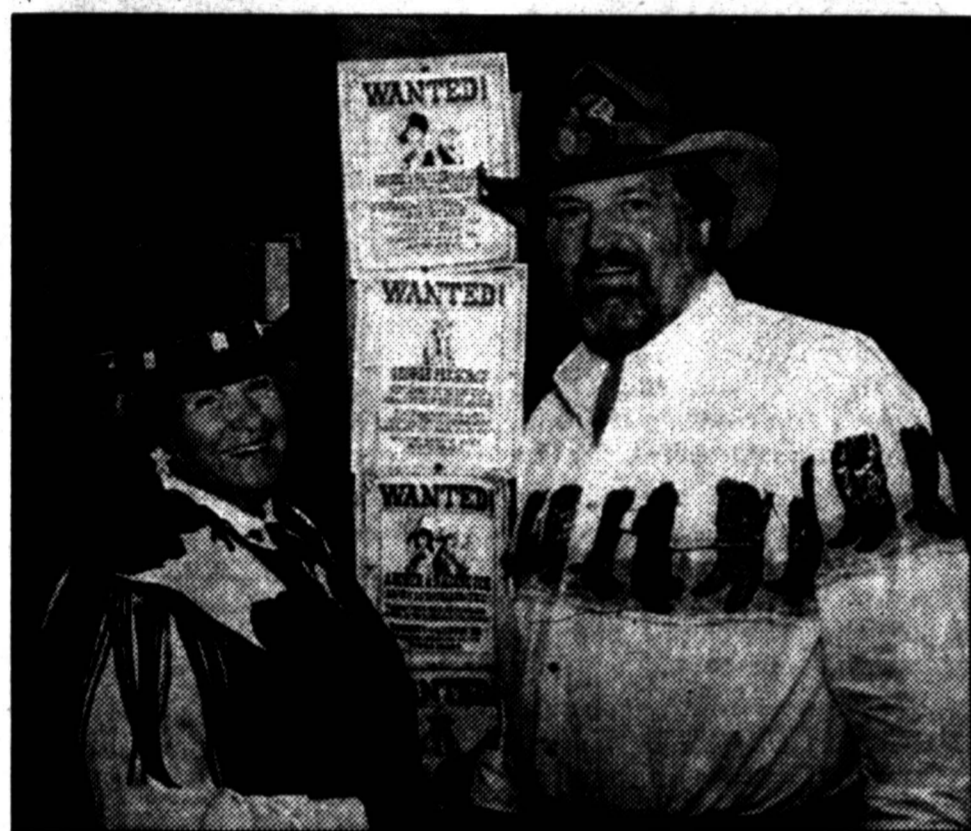

It looked like cowboys had taken over Indian Village in Pebble Beach Sunday, Sept. 8. But it was the good old Jesters' — the fund-raising arm of the Monterey Museum of Art — annual barbecue.

Joining in the latest dance craze, the Macarena, were gals and guys dressed in Western hats, ties and dungarees. But if that was the Macarena, I'm Dorothy Lamour!

Although the weather made it a mysteriously foggy day, that didn't stop more than 70 Jesters from attending, all of them ready to dance, eat barbecued chicken and play cowboys and cowgirls for the day.

All around the small

Dolores and Steve Gunia stand by a 'Wanted' poster at the Jester barbecue.

Benefit set for Carl Cherry Center for the Arts

"THE SPIRIT of Commedia dell'Arte," an evening of performance art, music and fine cuisine to benefit the nonprofit Carmel-based Carl Cherry Center for the Arts, will be held at 6:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 20 at the Highlands Inn, south of Carmel.

The evening will include performances by Taelen Thomas, Peggy Brown and Sean Folsom. The gala also features complimentary wine and cuisine by Highlands Inn chef Cal Stamenov.

The Carl Cherry Center for the Arts, established in 1948, supports and encourages programs in the arts, sciences and humanities.

Tickets are $75; reservations must be made by Sept. 16. Info: 624-7491.
